The Distinctiveness of Human Beings

Conceptual Integration

Conceptual Integration achieves mental packing in blended spaces. One exceptionally useful outcome of blended spaces is portable compressions at human scale, congenial to human cognition, that are intelligible, memorable, appropriate to the available bandwidth, and suitable for flexible unpacking in context. Repeated packing and unpacking in context produces changes in conceptual structure (including grammatical structure).

Conceptual Integration

The highest form of conceptual integration is “double-scope” integration, the hallmark of the singular everyday creativity that distinguishes human beings from other species. A double scope network has inputs with different (and often clashing) organizing frames and an organizing frame for the blend that includes parts of each of those organizing frames and has emergent structure of its own. In such networks, both organizing frames make central contributions to the blend, and their sharp differences offer the possibility of rich clashes. Far from blocking the construction of the network, such clashes offer challenges to the imagination and the resulting blends can turn out to be highly creative.

Grammatical constructions are form-meaning pairs. They are instruments for packing to achieve human scale. Language suitable for the inputs is selectively projected to the blend. New thoughts do not require new language! Consider, for example, the clausal Caused-Motion construction.
Caused-Motion:

INPUT 1

"I walked him into the room."
"He sneezed the napkin off the table."
"I pointed him toward the door."
"They teased him out of his senses."
"I will talk you through the procedure."
"I read him to sleep."
"They prayed the two boys home."
"I muscled the box into place."
"Hunk choked the life out of him."
"He floated the boat to me."

But also: “We blocked him from the door.”

Resultative Construction:
I boiled the pan dry
Grammatical Constructions

I boiled the pan dry. In the diffuse input, the causal chain runs from forgetting to the invariant position of the burner knob, to the flow of gas, to the flame, to the temperature of the pan, to the temperature of the water, to the level of the water, to the dryness of the pan. The agent performs no direct or indirect action on the pan at all. But in the blend, the compressed structure associated with the grammatical construction is projected together with some selected participants from the diffuse chain of events in the diffuse input. And so, in the blend, the agent is now acting directly on the pan. Moreover, although the boiling of the water is an event and its cause was something the agent did or did not do, there is cause-effect compression in the blend so that boiling is an action the agent performed. He even performed it on the pan.

Conceptual Integration

Conceptual Integration achieves mental packing in blended spaces. One exceptionally useful outcome of blended spaces is portable compressions at human scale, congenial to human cognition, that are intelligible, memorable, appropriate to the available bandwidth, and suitable for flexible unpacking in context.

Example: Space and Time packing in “An Inconvenient Truth”:
“An Inconvenient Truth” is the film version of Al Gore’s slide-show presentation on global warming. Close to the end, Gore shows a picture of the Earth as a what he calls a “pale blue dot.” The Earth is a single pixel on a huge cosmological screen, difficult even to pick out when he points at it. The picture was taken from a distance in space of 4 billion miles. Gore says, “Everything that has ever happened in all of human history has happened on that dot. All the triumphs and tragedies, all the wars and all the famines, all the major advances. That is what is at stake—our ability to live on planet Earth, to have a future as a civilization.”

And then he concludes the film with this blend: “Future generations may well have occasion to ask themselves, 'What were our parents thinking? Why didn’t they wake up when they had the chance?’ We have to hear that question from them now.”

Seabiscuit:
An allegory of the American people:

Seabiscuit tells how an unimpressive older horse with crooked legs and a short tail stole the hearts and minds of the American people during the Depression. In 1938, the No. 1 newsmaker was not FDR or Hitler; it was a horse that defined the word 'underdog.'

It was the indefinable quality of 'being game' that captured Americans. As one observer put it, Seabiscuit would rather die than be beaten in a race. Yet, unlike many champion thoroughbreds, his off-track personality was low-key, appealing and, frankly, lazy. He was a glutton for food and enjoyed the friendship of a horse named Pumpkin.

In short, he seemed the American Everyhorse, the equine version of how we see ourselves. Yet his race against the favored War Admiral is considered the greatest horse race in history. (Deirdre Donahue, 'Book club is spurred to choose "Seabiscuit",' USA Today, Thursday, 23 May 2002, page 1D.)

King Henry the Sixth, part one

Triumphant death, smear'd with captivity,
Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee.
When he perceiv'd me shrink and on my knee,
His bloody sword he brandish'd over me,
And like a hungry lion did commence
Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience;
But when my angry guardant stood alone,
Tend'ring my ruin and assail'd of none,
Dizzy-ey'd fury and great rage of heart
Suddenly made him from my side to start
Into the clust'ring battle of the French;
And in that sea of blood my boy did drench
His overmounting spirit; and there died,
My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

-King Henry the Sixth, part one, Act 4, Scene 7, lines 3-16.
Thou antic death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,
Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
Coupled in bonds of perpetuity,
Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
In thy despite shall 'scape mortality.
O, thou, whose wounds become hard-favour'd death,
Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy breath!
Brave death by speaking, whether he will or no;
Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.
Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say,
Had death been French, then death had died to-day.

-King Henry the Sixth, part one, Act 4, Scene 7, lines 18-28.
Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms.
My spirit can no longer bear these harms.
Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,
Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.  [Dies]

Causal Tautology

John Talbot Slays Death the French Warrior
Lord Talbot understands that imagined scenes can arouse strong emotions and powerfully shape the way we think and behave. Fervently wanting his son to speak to him before dying, and knowing his son's great motivation to defy the enemy, old Talbot prompts young Talbot to construct a blend in which Death intends to terminate John and his activity, to shut him down, to silence him. In such a blend, merely speaking becomes an act of defiance and bravery. This blend accordingly allows the son to tap his greatest sources of energy: his will to obey his father, his will to respect his father, and his will to defy the enemy. In the blend, they all motivate him in the same direction. In the blend, for John, to speak at all becomes simultaneously an act of obedience and respect for his father and an act of defiance of their joint enemy.
